

Roberts, E. (1998). Ecopsychology (special issue). Humanistic Psychologist, 26(1-3).

Includes:

Roberts, E., Place and the human spirit, pp. 5-34.

Metzner, R., The place and the story: Ecopsychology and bioregionalism, pp. 35-49.

Day, M. D., Ecopsychology and the restoration of home, pp. 51-67.

David, J., The transpersonal dimensions of ecopsychology: Nature, nonduality, and spiritual practice, pp. 69-100.

Kanner, A. D., Mount Rushmore Syndrome: When narcissism rules the Earth, pp. 101-121.

Hoffman, C., The Hoop and the Tree: An ecological model of health, pp. 123-154.

Anthony, C. & Soule, R., A multicultural approach to ecopsychology, pp. 155-161.

Sewall, L., Looking for a worldview: Perceptual practice in an ecological age, pp. 163-177.

Conn, S. A., Living in the Earth: Ecopsychology, health and psychotherapy, pp. 179-198.

Foster, S., The yellow brick road: Coming of age in the wilderness, pp. 199-216.

Gomes, M. E., Personal transformation and social change: Conversations with ecopsychologists in action, pp. 217-241.

Feral, C. H., The connectedness model and optimal development: Is ecopsychology the answer to emotional well-being? pp. 243-274

Thomashaw, M., The ecopsychology of global environmental change, pp. 275-300.

Horesh, T., Discovering and providing for the experience of nature, pp. 301-312.