

That's just human nature...	So is oppression, right?! What if abolitionists & women suffragists had resigned themselves to the challenges of their time?
It's not my problem...	Whose problem is it? With ability comes responsibility. Each of us contributes to the problems, so each can contribute to solutions.
I'm only one person...	So you can make one person's difference – no more, no less. You don't have to take on all the world's problems; just your part. The way you live your life sends a message about who you are and how the world could be.
I don't have the time or energy...	Actually, living in integrity with your values, and engaging in meaningful pursuits – especially in the company of like-minded others – is energizing!
